Eligibility Guidelines

SFPUC requires verification of household income and occupants. Household income is defined as the combined gross income of ALL persons who live in the household, whether taxable or non-taxable. Gross income includes, but is not limited to the total income from: wages, salaries, pensions, unemployment benefits, disability payments, workers compensation, gross income from self-employment (IRS Form 1040 Schedule C), child or spousal support, proceeds-sales price (IRS Form 1040 Schedule D), interest or dividends from savings accounts, stocks, bonds, retirement accounts, rent or royalty income, cash income or gifts, scholarships, grants, or other aid used for living expenses, insurance or legal settlements, Social Security, SSI, SSP, food stamps, or TANF (AFDC).

Anyone receiving the CAP discount and found to be in violation of program rules will be removed from the program and may be liable for repayment of the discount from the time that the discount was received.

After thorough review of program eligibility, applicants meeting the criteria are required to participate in a free water conservation home evaluation. The SFPUC's Water-Wise Evaluation is conducted by a trained water conservation specialist who may provide free efficient plumbing devices, help identify costly plumbing leaks, and show you ways to reduce water use.
